

Tale of Temptation

I swear I didn't touch the roast,
Or nibble on the buttered toast.
The crumbs? They floated through the air!
That steak? It vanished—I wouldn't dare.
Trust me, I'm as shocked as you!

The garbage tipped? A puzzling scene,
Perhaps the wind - or that cat so keen.
The scent arose, too rich, too sweet,
A banquet sprawled beneath my feet.
Who could resist such a tempting treat?

I'll drop my head and droop my ears,
Deploying all my guilty gears.
Forgive the thief, for how could I lie?
Your cooking is much too good to deny.
Now, can we talk about dessert?

Tale of Temptation

I swear I didn't touch the roast,
Or nibble on the buttered toast.
The crumbs? They floated through the air!
That steak? It vanished - I wouldn't dare.
Trust me, I'm as shocked as you!

The garbage tipped? A puzzling scene,
Perhaps the wind - or that cat so keen.
The scent arose, too rich, too sweet,
A banquet sprawled beneath my feet.
Who could resist such a tempting treat?

I'll drop my head and droop my ears,
Deploying all my guilty gears.
Forgive the thief, for how could I lie?
Your cooking is much too good to deny.
Now, can we talk about dessert?